The Home Rule Bill. The Government has committed itself gestion for the reduction of licences in to two policies for Ireland—conscription and Home Rule—and we must assume plication, and will, we hope, receive from that it will abandon neither of them. the Government that "careful and favour-Alf-. The need of men for the Army is acute, able consideration" which the Committee but it is now clear that the Government claims for it. With the main scheme we intends not merely to pass its Home Rule may deal very briefly. It contemplates the Bill, but to set up an Irish Parliament. State purchase of the whole Irish liquor before it enforces conscription. There-industry from top to bottom—brewers, disfore, for the Army's sake, the Home Rule tillers, maltsters, wholesale dealers, and re-Bill must be introduced with the least tail licences. According to this scheme the possible delay. A Committee has been State, after a statutory pledge of purchase, Bill must be introduced with the least possible delay. A Committee has been drafting the Bill for some time, but, although Parliament is now approaching the Whitsuntide recess, there is no sign of its appearance. We can guess, even without the help of Lobby rumours, that the Committee is in serious difficulties over its task. The Bill is based on the majority report of the Irish Committee is as feguard the interests of Unionist Ulster. It must includes special provisions to asfeguard the interests of Unionist Ulster. It must include special provisions to asfeguard the interests of Unionist Ulster. It must include special provisions to asfeguard the interests of Unionist Ulster. It must include a special provisions to asfeguard the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament. Limited by these two conditions, it must, nevertheless, be so framed as to make some appeal to the large body of Nationalists which demands the fullest masure of self-government for Ireland We cannot be aurprised that the Committee is making slow progress with its work, and its situation is not eased by the knowledge—for surely it must know—that the Government's cliwe-branch is being tendered to Ireland at the most unpropitious moment in the whole of Irish history. If, on the one hand, the national and international arguments for settlement are stronger than ever before, on the other hand all the old arguments against Home Rule have gained an one hand, the national and international arguments for settlement are stronger than ever before, on the other hand all the old arguments against them Rule have gained an one hand, the national and international arguments for settlement are stronger than ever before, on the other hand all the old arguments against them Rule have gained an one hand, the national and international arguments for settlement are stronger than ever before, on the other hand all the old arguments against them Rule have gained and international arguments for settlement are stronger than ever before, on the continue of the propose of t drafting the Bill for some time, but would assume complete control of the Nationalists and has been blessed by the Roman Catholic Church, "in concert with the leaders of Sins Fein."

Mr. Lloyd George's complaint is a very mild statement of the difficulties of the concert with the leaders of the difficulties of the concert with the leaders of Sins Fein.

NS We print the official report of yesterday's meeting of the Council of the Irish Unionist Alliance. The statement that "after considerable discussion the meeting adjourned" shows that the Council interpreted rightly the present feeling of a very large majority of Southern Unionists. The Suthern Unionist delegates played a patriotic and enlightened part in the Irish Convention. They held, and still hold, that the VICTORIA MOTOR ing on the fortunes of the Government's Home Rule Bill is vital. Unionists. The Southern Unionist delegates played a patriotic and enlightened part in the Irish Convention. They held, and still hold, that the Act of Union, if properly administered, is the best form of government for Ireland. The Prime Minister had told them, however, and still tells them, that a Home Rale to the Minister had told them, that a Home Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to the Rale to the Minister had told them to and still tells them, that a Home Rale settlement is essential to the winning of the war, and so they did their best to evolve a just and reasonable settlement. Their position was considered yesterday in the light of recent events, which, of course, have modified the situation that existed while the Convention cat. Nationalist Ireland has failed in a crucial test of loyalty to the Imperial Parliament and to the Empire, and the Southern Unionists must now revise their views on the whole question of settlement. Their ratifude to the Home Rule Bill must be affected by the Home Rule Bill must be affected by the increasing influence of Sian Fein and settlement and the Home Rule Bill must be affected by the increasing influence of Sian Fein and settlement and the increasing influence of Sian Fein and settlement and the increasing influence of Sian Fein and settlement and the set the increasing influence of Sian Fein and settlement and the set the set of the set of the set of the set of the composition of the set o the increasing influence of Sinn Fein and by the Roman Catholic Church's claim to the right of obstructing Imperial policy.
